Memories of the Classes of Nineteen Thirty-nine

WYANDOTTE, MICHIGAN

Foreword

WITHIN the covers of this book are recorded the living memories of our high school years, now drawing to a close. Here are years fraught with the intense activity of youth when we worked and played together in the great game of growing up. Herein are recorded the active events of yesterday, events in which we may still be engaged today . . . The smiles of our friends in these pictures still linger on the faces we meet daily. But in the years that are to come these pages will become even dearer to us because in them we will recall the many happy events and friends of the past and find in them a fragrance like the breath of flowers which will permeate and enrich each new day of our lives.
